CHAPTER 1 JACKS MORNING

Once upon a time there was a kid named Jack. He was a very good kid but the problem was that his life was very boring. Nothing exciting ever happened in his life. One day he woke up and started to get dressed but he couldn’t find any pants. So he started down the stairs but he tripped down the stairs and bumped into his mom. His mom was mad that he bumped into her. He told her that he couldn’t find any pants. She told him that it was a school day and that she would not wash any of his pants. So to make a long story short his mom made him wear some dirty pants. For breakfast there was porridge. Jack sat down and started to eat but the porridge spilled on his lap. And his mom made him wear his long underwear to school. On his way out the door some of the dirt from the window box above him fell on him. So he had dirt in his clothes. He told his mom but she said that he did not have time to shake it out. After they were half way there Jack realized that he forgot to brush his teeth. So he told his mom that they needed to go back home to brush his teeth. And for once his mom agreed with him that brushing you’re teeth is very important and that they should go back to brush them. They got back to they’re house and jack brushed his teeth. CHAPTER 2 JACKS SCHOOL MORNING. Jacks mom was mad at him for being late for school. When Jack got to school his mom said that that afternoon he was not allowed to play video games or watch TV. When he got into the hallway he slipped on a banana peel in the cafeteria and his head went into the custodian’s bucket of dirty water. When Jack got into the door way all the kids in his class laughed at his long underwear and the dirty water on his head oh my gosh I forgot all about the long underwear Jack thought. Then a little dirt came out from his shirt and the kids laughed even louder then before and even his best friend Nate laughed at him. He sat down at his desk and his teacher mrs. Stoll walked around the room and graded all of the kids papers from the quiz that mrs. Stoll given them the day before. When mrs. Stoll came to Jack she gave him an F because instead of studying he was watching a really really dum show on the history channel. But the really annoying thing is that all the other kids got As or Bs. When Jack saw the “F” on his paper, he asked Mrs. Stoll what he done wrong. But she didn’t even have to answer because when he looked down he saw that he had spelled every word wrong. He had, in fact, spelled every word backwards, so that in the mirror they would have been correct. Oh, well. “Better put in more effort next time, Jack,” said Mrs. Stoll. Now Jack was getting a bit down. But he had recess to look forward to! The new snow that had fallen last night! Perfect for snowballs. As soon as they got outside Jack thought of throwing a snowball at Nate. He knew he wasn’t allowed to throw snowballs at kids in school, but today, it was so perfect, he couldn’t resist. Without his thinking about it, his hands formed a perfect ball, and before he knew it, the ball hit Nate on the ear with a kind of thuddy swoosh. Uh oh. The recess teacher was looking at just the wrong moment. Nate was smiling from swooshed ear to smushed ear, but Mrs. Monk was not. “Jack! To the principal’s office!” she said

Chapter 3. The principal’s office adventure. When Jack got into the principal’s office he slipped on the rug and bumped into the desk and papers went flying everywhere. The principal was sooooooooooooo mad that Jack mixed up all his papers he gave Jack detention for the next month. So Jack was pretty down by now no actually he was very down no he was actually very very down. Well so the principal yelled at him for about # 20 minuets then sent Jack back to his class with a sad look on his face. While he was walking in the hall the principal was yelling at him from back at his office. And then for the first time he realized that he had one of the most important of the principal’s papers stuck to him. The principal gave Jack suspension for #3 days then when he was walking out the door he stepped on a stinkbug. The principal was so furious that his office smelled bad and messed up I can’t even explain it. Well so Jack got suspension for a week and a half. Since he had suspension he had to leave and go home. His mom was very very very very very very very mad at Jack about what the principal did to him and that she had to come all the way from work to get him. When Jack and his mom were in the car on the way back from school his mom told him that he was not allowed to watch TV or play video games for two weeks. On the way back home Jack mom called his dad to tell him what Jack did. But his dad who was on a business trip in California was mad at Jacks mom for disturbing him. And his mom was mad at Jack because he did something bad that made her half to call his dad and get yelled at. And to make a another long story short his mom grounded him for a week.

Chapter 4 Jack’s Grounding

So Jack was grounded. What to do while forced to stay home, every afternoon? No videogames. No TV. What else is there to do in life?

Jack pondered. “Ground” made him think of “underground.” “Underground” made him think of “secret underground cave.” Ah hah! Suddenly Jack had plan. He knew there was a shovel in the garage. But how to get there without his mom noticing?

He took out a book and started to “read,” or at least make it look as though he were reading. After ten minutes or so, his mom appeared to be satisfied that Jack was lost in his book. She went upstairs to do some kind of boring work. He knew, when she was doing this boring work, he could be pretty safe from interference. He found a good place to start shoveling, on the side of the house, where she wouldn’t hear. His shovel hit a rock, making a loud clank. Jack held his shovel still, his heart beating fast. He waited for what seemed like an eternity, expecting his mom to come downstairs, shouting. But she didn’t. She was still lost in thought. He went back to his shoveling. For twenty minutes, the only dangers he encountered were worms and insects. But he started to tire, and began to long to read. He would get back to work, tomorrow. But it was then he realized he had been out digging for half an hour. And then his mom came down the stair holding a book with no bookmark.

And not only that! It was the book he had been pretending to read... Jack what have you been doing said his mom. Well he had to spill the beans. Of course he got grounded for a month and wasn’t allowed to play video games for two month’s. So now he really had to go to his room. Felling as down as you can get he went up to his room and also he had nothing to look forward to. He opened the door to his room and... SURPRISE!!! Everybody the principal mrs. Monk Nate his mom all the kids who laughed at him. HAPPY BIRTHDAY JACK!!! They all said. Oh my god I forgot all about my birthday thought Jack. And then they explained that everything they did to him was to get him so they could surprise him. And it worked. So now Jack was happy. The end.